THE OPENING OF THE JEWELLERY MUSEUM OF HAMA'LU

BY EMMA BOGAERT

Hama'lu has many unique traits and places. But one of the things Hama'lu stands out the most is for being the only remaining country with platinum. Platinum is a precious silvery-white metal mostly used in electronics and jewellery. Therefore, an entire museum dedicated to this precious chemical element was a logical step.

The history of platinum

Platinum has a long and complicated history. Around the 16th century, colonizers invaded our country in search of commodities such as gold, platinum, silver, lithium,... With all that came a lot of violence and human suffering. Thank goodness, times have changed, and Hama'lu is in good hands thanks to our leaders.

Not 'just a boring museum'

The museum isn't all about the history of Hama'lu's platinum. You will also be more informed how platinum is being mined now, how we avoid conflicts with other countries, how we obtain our strong economic position, ... Briefly, you will leave with much more knowledge and insights of the jewellery industry. We used different forms of media in the museum to introduce you to this knowledge. You can book a guide, listen to an audio guide, view information on interactive touchscreens, see movies and pictures, ... We want to make learning fun for everyone.

Famous jewellery collections

Moreover you will also find the most precious jewellery collections made in Hama'lu. The museum features collections from different time ages. You will also see pictures of F.H. (famous Hamaluans) wearing these jewels. We have jewels from Queen Ariadna, Miss Eliose, duke Richard Caviolo, Lady Gaga, Marnissa the duvea and many more. We also have a special collection dedicated to The Kalaunu, the headpiece of Hama'lu.

Opening of the museum

After hearing all of this, you probably can't wait to explore the museum. The opening of the museum takes place on Friday the 17th of December at the central square in Platina, where the museum is located. Everyone is welcome at the opening (or at any other moment) to come and visit the museum. The museum will also welcome schools and other groups. Furthermore, the museum is fully accessible to people with disabilities.
