SCOOP: FIRST CLIMATE MARKET IN COLLABORATION WITH VETUS NOVUS

BY ASC

You are never too old to learn, right? That's what the leaders of Hama'lu and Venus Novus were thinking when they put their heads together, thinking about how to make the younger population of Vetus Novus stay.

Climate issues

A lot of trouble brewed in Vetus Novus regarding climate. The young inhabitants did not agree with how their government dealt with urgent climate issues. They organized a lot of protests, demonstrating for change. The protest didn't change much, and the protesters lost their hopes. They were so desperate that they sought the help of our country, Hama'lu.

The young inhabitants of Vetus Novus see Hama'lu as a great example on how to deal with climate change and pollution. Since last week, a lot of them have come to Platina to seek asylum. We as a country were glad to welcome people with the same values as ours. But we weren't ready for such a big influx. That's why we came together with the leaders of Vetus Novus to look for a solution that benefits us both.

Climate market

With that in mind, the climate market idea was born. It has the cosiness of a Christmas market, but will mostly serve an educational purpose. A good mix of business and pleasure. The market will be organised on 10 January in Lumbus. A handful of interesting speakers are set to participate and share their knowledge: Thomao Drickson who founded a new way to reduce energy, Lidia Verna who is the climate leader of the UBN and many more. You can participate in workshops and debates and learn more from each other. The main goal of the event is to inspire each other and go home with a lot of new knowledge.

In addition to the educational side of things, you will be able to have some hands-on experience at the climate market as well. You can find vegan dishes, create your own little solar panel, see the benefits of having some chickens at work and compete in the river cleanup race. So make sure to bring your kids or your grandparents, because there is something for everyone.

See you there!
